Diploma Overview

The Fashion Design Diploma offers an immersive, comprehensive program aimed at equipping students with the essential skills and knowledge required to succeed in the fashion industry. This diploma provides a blend of practical and theoretical education in fashion design, pattern making, textiles, garment construction, and trend forecasting. Students will learn how to conceptualize and develop their own collections, understand fashion history and the influence of culture on fashion, and gain proficiency in using both traditional and digital tools for designing. Courses also cover aspects of fashion business, marketing, and branding to provide students with a holistic understanding of the industry. The program emphasizes hands-on experience through workshops, industry collaborations, and the opportunity to showcase collections in fashion shows. By the end of the diploma, students will have developed a strong portfolio and gained the expertise necessary to enter the global fashion industry or start their own fashion label.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this Diploma, students will be able to:

- Develop unique, innovative fashion concepts and translate them into garment designs using sketches, digital software, and other design tools.
- Mastery of pattern making, draping, and garment construction techniques, enabling students to bring their designs to life with precision and detail
- Have textile knowledge, In-depth understanding of different textiles, fabrics, and materials, including how they behave, how to select the right materials for various designs, and sustainable fabric choices
- Have skills in researching and predicting fashion trends, understanding consumer behavior, and incorporating cultural and social influences into fashion designs.
- Have proficiency in industry-standard software.
- Have knowledge of the fashion industry's business aspects, including branding, marketing, pricing, and distribution, to prepare for launching or managing fashion lines.

Final Project

The graduation project consists of two or three key sessions, designed to guide students through the final steps of their fashion design journey. The first session focuses on mood board creation, where students are required to visually communicate the inspiration and theme of their collection. This mood board should include images, colors, fabrics, textures, and sketches that reflect the concept, style, and overall mood they intend to convey. Students will present their mood boards for feedback, refining them to ensure a clear and cohesive direction for their project. The final submission includes a presentation of the three completed outfits, along with a comprehensive explanation of the design choices, materials used, and overall vision of the collection. The project concludes with a final evaluation, where students demonstrate their ability to bring their ideas to life through their outfits.

Requirements for Successfully Passing the Diploma

- Commitment to attend the training courses and not to exceed the permitted absence rate, which is 15% of the number of hours for the training courses.
